

Song: "Nobody Told Me"

Album: Reckonings (2023 Release by Eric Kilburn)

Nobody told me about this part
The burden that comes with a beating heart
Where you love someone so deep and long
And turn around and they are gone

We wail to the heavens , we rage at God
We shake with the power of a lightning rod
As we gather here, crying in the pews
For all the things we don't get to choose

Nobody told me about this ache
I shake my head like there's some mistake
Some bad dream I will awaken from
And I'll hear your laughter once again

We search for the answers, but the questions are wrong
And all we can do is carry on
Reminded why the old man sings the blues
For all the things we have to lose

We've come so far, forever tempting fate
We thought we were in charge
That was our first mistake

Nobody told me about this love
Was it something I should have been scared of
The risks we somehow have to take
And the best choices we could ever make

So we open ourselves and life comes in
It's a roll of the dice and the odds are slim
That we ever get out of this place without paying dues
For all the things, we have to lose
For all the things, we don't get to choose
